

An Integrated Life

HELEN MITCHELL

The culture of work and employment encourages compartmentalization. People joke about having a work spouse. Parents speak of leaving their children's care to the professionals. A life of faith is cultivated on a sabbath. What if compartmentalization needs to give way to integration?

For Deeper Conversation

1. How do you define a wholeness of life? How does having the mind of Christ factor into your definition? How about your sense of calling and vocation?
2. What remains for you to more fully develop and live an integrated life? Are there parts of your life that have an unhealthy priority over another?
3. How would you describe your own mindset for an integrated life? After listening to this podcast, what are you committing to in your own journey toward wholeness of life?
4. What level of integration of human flourishing does your company strategy and culture encourage? How is this reflected in your sense of corporate social responsibility?
5. Who should be in ongoing conversation with you about these things? When will you next have occasion to dig down and reflect with them?

Going Deeper Still

Serving Marketplace Leaders
by Helen Mitchell

<https://bit.ly/2DP7Pq5>

Business for the Common Good
by Kenman L. Wong & Scott B. Rae

<https://amzn.to/3h1HNOI>

Spiritual Leadership
by J. Oswald Sanders

<https://amzn.to/3j96xq3>

To connect with Helen, head to convenenow.com/helenmitchell or email helen.mitchell@convenenow.com